Lauren Foisy, a longtime member of the nonprofit Council Rock Coalition for Healthy Youth, recently won the Outstanding Youth Leader award from the Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America (CADCA).

Foisy, a Council Rock High School South graduate and Penn State University student majoring in agriculture, accepted the award at CACA's national leadership awards luncheon.

A member of the Council Rock nonprofit for almost a decade, Foisy has pursued the cause of drug, tobacco and alcohol abuse prevention with vigor, CADCA officials said.

“She has carried the youth voice to local, state and national platforms,” they said. “She has advocated for local ordinance changes for smoke-free parks and fields. She testified at a stat Senate hearing on privatizing Pennsylvania’s state-owned liquor stores, and has hosted a youth-led town hall meeting to discuss national issues.”
